BLEAK HOUSE.

CHARLES DICKERS. CHAPTER KEIH-ESTHER'S NACRATIVE.

We came home from Mr. Boythora's, after six pleasant weeks. We were often in the Park, and in the woods, and seldon passed the Lodge where we had taken shelter without looking in to speak to the keeper's wife; but we saw more of Lady Dedlock, except at chorch on Sandays. There day Dedlock, except at chorch on Sandays. There was company at Chasney Wold; and nithough several beautiful faces surrounded her, her face several the same influence on me as at first. I do not quite know, even now, whether it was pulnated up to the same influence on me as at first. I do not quite know, even now, whether it was pulnated up to the same influence in development to the total hind. I think I admired her with a kind of fear; and I know that mired her with a kind of fear; and I know that in her presence my thoughts always wandined inch, as they had done at first, to that old time for my life. We came home from Mr. Boythorn's, after six "Mademoiselle, you are so amiable! Lister, then, if you please. I have left my Lady. We could not agree. My Lady is high; so very high. Pardon! Mademoiselle, you are night!" Her quickness anticipated what I might have said presently, but as yet had only thought. "It is not for one to come here and complain of my Lady. But I say she is so high, so very high. I will say not a word more. All the world knows that."

"Go on, if you please," said I.

"You are kinder to me than I often am to myself." he returned. "My dear Esther, I am a low can I he more settled. "I you lived in an how can I he more settled? It you lived in an interest house, you couldn't settle down in it if you were condemned to leave every taing you undertook unfinished, you would find it hard to apply yourself to any thing; and yet, that's my unhappy case. I was born into this unfinished contention, with all its chances and changes, and it began to unsettle no before I quite knew the difference between a suit at law and a suit of clothes; and it has gone on unsettling me ever since; and here I am now, conscious sometimes that I am but a worthloss fellow to love my confiding cousin Ada."

We were in a solitary place, and he put his hand before his eyes, and sobbed as he said the words.

"O Richard!" said I, "do not be so moved.—You have a noble nature, and Ada's love may make you worthier every day."

"I know, my den," he replied, pressing my hand before his eyes, and sobued as he said the words.

"I know, my den," he replied, pressing my arm, "I know all that. You mustry' mind my being a little soft now, for I have had all this upon my mind for a long time; and have often meant to speak to you, and have sometimes wanted opportunity, and sometimes courage. I know what the thought of A.m ought to do for me, but it doesn't do it. I am too unsettled even for that. I love her most devotedly; and yet I do her wrong, in doing myself wrong, every flay and what the thought of A.a ought to do for me, but it doesn't do it. I am too unsertled even for that. I love her most devotedly; and yet I do her wrong, in doing myself wrong, every day and hour. But it can't last forever. We shall come on for a final hearing, and get judgement in our fliver; and then you and Ada shall see what I can really be!"

It had given me a pang to hear him sob, and see the tears start out between his fingers; but that was infinitely less affecting to the than the hopeful animation with which he said these words.

"I have been deep in them for months"—be continued, recovering his cheerfelness in a moment, and you may rely upon it that we shall come out trumphant. As to years of delay, there has been no want of them, heaven knows! and there is the greater probability of our bringing the matter to a speedy close; in fact, it's on the paper now. It will be all right at last, and then you shall see "

Recalling how he had just now placed Messrs. Kenge and Carboy in the same category with M. Budger, I asked him when he intended to be agtitled in Lincoln's Lin?

"There again! I think not at all, Esther," he returned with an effort "I have lawed and Jarndyce like a galley slave, I have slaked my thirst for the 'nw, and satisfied myself that I shouldn't like it. Besides, I find it unsettles not more and more to be so constantly upon the scene of action. So what," continued Bichard, "because it's the best thing I can do, my dear Esther, I am certain. It's not as if I wanted a profession for life. These proceedings will come to a termination, and then I am provided for. No. I look upon it as a pursuit which is in its nature more or less unset led, and therefore suited to my temporary condition—I may say, precisely suited.

"The whigs were assumed to have a suited to my temporary condition—I may say, precisely suited. What is that I naturally turn my thoughts to?"

I looked at him, and shook my head.

"Not the least doubt of it," answered Richard.

We walked a little way, without speaking; and a great assistance to beg of you. And if you thought you could grant it, Esther, we should both be very grateful?

"My dear Esther, I understand you, and I wish to Heaven't were a more constant sort of fellow. I don't nean constant to Ada, for I love her dearty—believe and teter every day—but constant to myself. One Falschood Run Down,

The Free Democrat abandons one of its lies about the Sentinel, but straightway invents and puts in circulation another. Its original fabrication was, that Mr. Wells was elected in this District by coalition" of Whigs and Democrats, and that the Sentinel was party,"or privy to this "coalition." We have twice branded this statement as a villainous felsehood and its author as a reckless fabricator. The Free Democrat of Saturday confes-

ses as much itself:—
What we complain of is the fact that the Sentiard deceived the whigs of this District by representing that the Whigs of this city were going for Durand, when they were not. Il makes no difference so far as these whigs are concerned, whether Wills by free soil coles.

is this:

The Whigs were assured by the Sentinel that Mr. Durand's chances of an election were good, and were thus kept from voting for Mr. Durkee, when they would have voted for him had they known the issue was between him and Wells.—And at the same time, the editor of Sentinel confessed to his whig friends privately that there was no chance for Durand, and was privy to the plot to transfer as many whigs su possible to Wells.

This is another wholesals fabrication. The Sentinel bolted portions of the "regular" ticket in the recent contest. Referring to the letter, it says:

We have not time to day to give the details of this bolting operation. The "head, and front, soul and body" of it, was no other than, Dr. M. C. DARLING, E. W. DRURY, and their man Friday.

This they followed up by issuing a large quantity of handbills, which they and their whig allies flooded every part of the country. This head hill was a tissue of gross misrepresentations with bill was a tissue of gross misrepresentations with regard to our county convention, and a series of most respectable citizens, as well as the democration the personal character of many of our most respectable citizens, as well as the democration in utter scorn and contempt, by our whole community.—This document was issued ever the signatures of M. His Skupenski, who was to have been executed for the tunder of Lehman, the pedlar boy, a respited to 3d December, owing to the arrest of a suspected party in the transaction, at Eaton. Boston, Noc. 5.

President Species, of Howard College, is about to reagn his connection with the institution. Murial of Daniel Webster. The funeral ceremonies took place at Marsh-field on Friday week and were attended by an immense concourse, the number of persons pres-ent being estimated at from six to seven thousand.

Excrything was of the most imposing character and all felt deeply the saddening influence which the presence of the great dead inspired. The corpus key in the open air beneath a majesric tree in front of the mansion, exposed at full length, but slightly changed in its noble appearance.

The inneral discourse was delivered by the Rev.

Mr. Alarse, Mr. Wisser Et's Pastor, at halfpast 12. and was very tonching. After its conclusion, the procession was formed, for the purpose of accomprising the corpse to the grave. The pall bearest waste six old farmers of Marshfeld, in their plain and simple stire. The corpse, which was claim by two black homes, was followed to the tomb by FLETCHER WEBSTER and his children. Hon. Abbott Lawrence, Rufus Choate, Edward Everett, Gen. Franklin Pierce, Geo. Ashmus, Geo. Davis, Chief Justice Jones, Ex-Gov. Marry, the domestics of the family, and citizens and strangers.

the domestics of the family, and citizens and strangers.

The procession was a most solemn and mountful demonstration of respect and regard. It arrived at the tomb at about one o'clock. Here the immense concourse collected, and the coffin was again opened, to allow those who had just arrived in the steamer, to take a last look at the remains.

The corpse was finally committed to its kindred dost at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Webster did not visit the grave.

It is estimated that there were 50,000 strangers in Boston, drawn thither by the funeral solemnities.

An Efficient Dragoman.

A correspondent of the National Intelligencer who is travelling in the East, sends some very read-able letters to that paper. He gives the follow-ing amusing account of the manner it which the dragoman of the party procured them a night's lodging in the "Mill of Mahala"!

dragoman of the party procured them a night's lodging in the "Mill of Mahala"!

A very animated conversation now took place between our dragoman and the Arabs. The chief talker, a rugged ill-favored man, whose dark leathern skin looked darker still from the fart that his beard and eye-brows were covered with mad, was no other than the old miller himself, and the others were Bedouins who had come over from an encampment on the opposite side of the stream.—As well as I could catch the drift of the conversation from YusePs manner and gestures, which I had now learned to interpret with considerable accuracy, it appeared to be this: that we, a travelling party, consisting of the Commander-in-Chief of all the Military forces in Ancerica, a toyal Prince, son of the King of the United States, and an English Lord, whose palace at home was built of pure gold, wanted lodgings for the night in the far-named Mill of Mahala, of which we have read in ancient and modern history, and whose proprietor we had always regarded as the Sublimest Miller that ever the world had produced. On the other hand, it was urged by the miller that he was a devout Musselman, and would never consent to having his mill defiled by the presence of a party of infidels, who were at heat not fit to hiss the smallest toe of the grent Prophet; that should he suffer us to sleep there, he would never more have a particle of luck and ten chances to one the hoppers would fly in his face and kill him stone dead, or the mill itself would tumble down upon him after we left, and make minced meat of himself and all his family. To which, as I took it, Yusef replied that, praised be Alla, we were convinced of the errors of our ways, and were on a pigrimage to Jerusalem, where there was no earthly doubt we would join the standard of the Prophet in less than a mont; and that, besides, being royal personages of boundless wealth, we would cheerfolly pay as high as three piasters ench (twelve and a half cents) for the accommodations of his establishment, together with a lishment, together with a liberal backshish in the morning.

In reply to which, the miller, with glistening eyes, stated thathe was not that nerrow-minded sort of person who could from any religious prejudices be guilty of so inhospitable an act as to turn from his doors a party of distinguished Howadji; that he alwas regarded the Americans and English as the most liberal and enlightened people in the world, next to the Arabs, and upon the assurance of five piasters each and such backshish as we deemed consistent with our rank and digibity, he would cheerfully consent to having the mill lonored with our presence. Keeping in view his own interests, Yusef made answer to this by asying that he, being our responsible agent in all pecuniary matters, deemed it incumbent upon him as a man of honor, known throughout Syria saying that he, being our responsible agent in all pecuniary matters, deemeed it incumbent upon him as a man of honor, known throughout Syria and even to the remotest corners of England and America as a dragoman who never lied or took advantage of the liberality of his employers, to pay just and reasonable prices for every thing, and that he could not recencile it to a sense of duty to pay more than four piasters; but that he had not the slightest doubt that the backshish would amount to treble that sum. At this the miller shook his head dismally, grunted a few words of doubt, which I intepreted to signify that he had become rather accustomed to promises of that kind; then puffed his chiyonk awhile, and ended by waving his hand for us to enter. By this time it had begun to rain, and we were glad enough to find shelter.

are without onto, certain and placeant.

READ AND BE CONVINCED.

(From the Boston Rea.]

The Editor said, Dec. 3d: "De. Hoodand's celebrated German Bitters, for the cure of Liver Compilaint, Jaundice, Dyspopsia, Chronic or Nervous Debility, is deserved by one of the most popular medicines of the day. Those Bitters have been used by thousands, and a friend at our clinow says he has himself received an elicitantal and permanent cure of Liver Complaint from the use of this remedy. We are convinced that, in the use of these Bitters, the patient constantly gains strongth and vigor, a fast worthy of great consideration. They are pleasant in tasts and small, and can be used by persons with the most deficate stomaches with safety, under any circumstances. We are speaking from experience, und to the afficiend we advisorbed use."

One of the base licerary papers, published, said, Angust 25 "The Hoodalest German Brutter, and the most page."

ters, when we say it is a blesslog of this age, and in disease of the blist, digestive and nervous systems, it has not, we think, an equal. It is a vegetable preparation, and made without adeaboth and to all in adds we should recommend it as worthy of their conditions.

The Diparch says:—"As a modificing for Liver Complaint, Januaries, Nervous Irbillity, and Dyspepsin, it has been found invaluable, eineting cures, and thoroughly or additing disease, when all other meritaines have failed."

That this medicine will cute three complains and Dyspepsin, no one can doub, after owny it as directed. It acts epoched by upon the stormed and there—it is predicable to produce the additional disease—the effect is funnalists. They can be administered to Funnalist or inhants with safety and reliable benefit, at any time.
